Family Name History

MORBEY

The English surname Morby, and its variants Moorby, Morby and Murby, is of toponymic origin, that is, it belongs to the category of surnames derived from the first name of the father of the initial bearer. In this instance, the name indicates "one who came from Moorby", the name of a place in Co. Lincolnshire, near Horncastle. The toponym Moorby is derived from the Old English "mor", in Middle English "moor", meaning "moor, fen, marsh". The suffix "-by" is of Norse origin, derived from the Old Norse word "byr, bye" which originally denoted "homestead, farm". However, at an early date this word came to indicate "settlement, village, town". Similar place names include Morland, Morton, Morecroft, Morhouse and Moorhead. The toponym Moorby is first recorded in the Domesday Book of Lincolnshire. The Domesday Book is a written record of a survey of English landowners and their property carried out by order of William the Conqueror 1085-87:

"In Moorby 3 carucages and 7 bovates of lands.
8 Freemen and 10 smallholders have 4 ploughs.
A church; meadow, 240 acres; underwood, 6 acres".

The Poll Tax Returns for Yorkshire contain a reference to one Elena de Moreby in 1379. The marriage of Joseph Moreby and Mary Wood is registered in Canterbury in 1675.

Geschichte des Familiennamens

MORBEY

Der englische Nachname Morby und seine Varianten Moorby, Morby und Murby sind toponymischen Ursprungs, d. h. sie gehören zu der Kategorie der Nachnamen, die vom Vornamen des Vaters des ursprünglichen Hörers abgeleitet sind. In diesem Fall bezeichnet der Name „jemanden, der aus Moorby stammt“, dem Namen eines Ortes in der Grafschaft Lincolnshire, in der Nähe von Horncastle. Der Toponym Moorby leitet sich vom altenglischen „mor“ ab, im Mittenglischen „moor“; was „Moor, Sumpf“ bedeutet. Die Endung „-by“ ist nordischen Ursprungs und leitet sich vom altnordischen Wort „byr, bye“ ab, das ursprünglich „Gehöft, Bauernhof“ bezeichnete. Schon früh bezeichnete dieses Wort jedoch „Siedlung, Dorf, Stadt“. Ähnliche Ortsnamen sind Morland, Morton, Morecroft, Morhouse und Moorhead. Der Toponym Moorby wird erstmals im Domesday Book von Lincolnshire erwähnt. Das Domesday Book ist eine schriftliche Aufzeichnung einer Erhebung englischer Landbesitzer und ihres Eigentums, die im Auftrag von Wilhelm dem Eroberer 1085-87 durchgeführt wurde:

"In Moorby 3 Carucates und 7 Buvates Land.

8 Freie und 10 Kleinbauern haben 4 Pflüge.

Eine Kirche; Wiese, 240 Acres; Unterholz, 6 Acres".

Die Steuererklärungen für Yorkshire enthalten einen Hinweis auf eine Elena de Moreby im Jahr 1379. Die Heirat von Joseph Moreby und Mary Wood ist 1675 in Canterbury registriert.

Wappen: es ist silber, auf einem blauen Band drei durch gebohrne (eingefasste) goldene sechsstrahlige Sterne.

Übersetzung: Die Sterne sind Abzeichen der Ehre und der Erbringung von Diensten für den Staat. Silber (weiß) repräsentiert den Mond und steht für Reinheit, Unschuld und Gehorsam. Das Band bedeutet Schutz und Verteidigung.

Helmzier: ein goldener Adler (Symbol für Macht und Wohlstand).

John Morbey

1786 - 1842

Sir Robert de Moreby

1286 – 1336 oder 1272 - 1335 (im Alter von 50-64) *

Der älteste Sohn von William de Moreby, Gutsherr von Stillingfleet. Er diente in Eduards II. Schottischen Kriegen von 1310 bis 1320 unter Lord Grey de Hotherfield. 1318 heiratete er Margaret, die Witwe von Lord John Grey und jüngste Tochter von William de Oddinfsells of Marstock, Warwick. Von 1321 bis 1323 war er Wächter von Breocknock Castle und hatte den königlichen Auftrag, die walisische Grenze gegen Rebellen zu verteidigen. 1322 zum Ritter geschlagen, begleitete er im folgenden Jahr Königin Isabellas Gefolge durch Frankreich. 1328 war er Gutachter des königlichen Haushalts in Berwick-upon-Tweed und wurde 1329 mit der Verantwortung für Burg und Hof von Knaresborough betraut. Er saß im Friedensausschuss von West Riding. Er wurde 1330 als Ritter der Grafschaft für Oxfordshire ins Parlament gewählt und saß 1331 erneut dort, diesmal als einer der beiden Abgeordneten Yorkshires. Nach diesem Dienst zog er sich nach Moreby zurück und wurde lebenslang von der Pflicht befreit, in Gerichts- und Geschworenengerichten mitzuwirken oder ein städtisches Amt zu übernehmen. Sein letztes öffentliches Erscheinen erfolgte 1335, als er beauftragt wurde, die Männer von Oxfordshire und Berkshire entsprechend ihrem Stand zu bewaffnen und auszurüsten. Er hinterließ einen Sohn und Erben, William, geboren um 1324.

Morbey's in Germany

1st Generation

Thomas Morbey in Hanover, around 1820

ADOLPHUS FREDERICK MORBEY (1820-1860)
Born 12th September 1820 in Hanover, Germany
Baptised 11th November 1820 in Lutheran Church, Hanover.

ADOLPHUS FREDERICK was the son of THOMAS MORBEY groom to H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, (also called Adolphus Frederick (1774-1850) who was the youngest surviving son of George III, Viceroy of Hanover, 1816-1837) and Ann Breitchardt.
In 1851 Adolphus Frederick Morbey became a groom to Viscount Newark (ne Sydney Pierrepont (1825-1910), later 3rd Earl Manvers) at Thoresby Hall, Notts.
Adolphus married Matilda Walker, daughter of Inigo Walker (baker) on 31st May 1853 at St. Martin-in-the-Fields, Westminster. He was described as a groom, of Long Acre.
Between 1854-1860 he was stud groom to Viscount Newark at the latter's other Nottinghamshire seat - Holme Pierrepont Hall - and four children were born there to Adolphus and Matilda.
He died at Holme Pierrepont on 20th June 1860, apparently in a riding accident, aged 39. He is an ancestor of Charles Morbey, the jockey, mentioned in the Census extract from 1881 for Cambridgeshire (p. 5) and an article regarding him appears in Issue 1 of the Morbey Newsletter.
Adolphus Frederick Morbey's widow, Matilda, died on 6th January 1902, at the age of 76.

2nd Generation

following the marriage of Guilherme and Brigitte in 1977 in Lisbon. They initially lived in Herzogenaurach, Bavaria, where Brigitte has lived ever since.

03 Steamships Era: Coal trade in Cape Verde Morbey Portuguese Branch spread out

Cape Verde, Portugal, Angola, Mozambique

For family members

Mindelo became a vital coaling station for steamships crossing the Atlantic, especially after 1850. The business of Millers & Corys was supplying these ships with coal.

Hospital do Telégrafo (Fonte: acervo do autor)

1. Hospital do Telégrafo

Segundo consta, este edifício pertenceu a António Joaquim de Miller até a década de 70 do séc XIX, um dos primeiros edifícios construídos na Rua 5 de Julho. Em seguida passa a pertencer às companhias Inglesas, onde acomodavam os seus empregados. Acredita-se que em 1910, ordenaram a construção da torre, que até então não existia, 20 anos mais tarde instalam no edifício o Hospital do Telégrafo.¹⁰⁷

O edifício recebe o nome de Hospital do Telégrafo porque se encontrava anexado à Estação do Telégrafo, servindo-se de referência para os habitantes de S. Vicente.¹⁰⁸

Nos anos 70 do séc. XX deixa de funcionar como hospital e passa a ser o Club Inglês, funcionado em parte como escola primária.¹⁰⁸

Com a queda da indústria carvoeira e com o abandono da ilha por parte dos ingleses, o edifício continuou a funcionar como escola primária até o início do séc. XXI. Hoje em dia o edifício encontra-se completamente degradado e abandonado, mesmo pertencendo à maior companhia telefónica de Cabo Verde.

MARIANO MACHADO

A nossa «Gazeta» tem hoje a, prantejar mais uma perda, e perda irreparável: Mariano Machado. Levou-o a Morte, inesperadamente, brutalmente, em poucas horas de luta, depois de ter estado ao pé de nós a trabalhar ainda pela felicidade dum das colónias a que tinha dado, numa devoção de português antigo, o melhor quinhão do sua laboriosa vida.

Mariano Machado não era apenas o homem, cheio de méritos, que gastara os ombros a produzir trabalho:

era, principalmente, uma alma, cheia de virtudes, que se consunhira a defender uma ideia. As expedições militares, arrancavam-lhe grito de dor. Torturavam-no como desperdícios loucos numa casa de miséria, — devorando ouro, e consumindo vidas, que viriam a fazer falta para as produções da terra.

A sua política, — era a dos caminhos de ferro. Preferia a ocupação pacífica e duradoura pela locomotiva, ao domínio agressivo e passageiro pelo canhão. Reduzia a quilómetros de via férrea as importâncias gastas pelas colunas de operações, e demonstrava que já teríamos o vapor da máquina a silvar por toda a terra do ultramar se, em vez de consumirmos munições em submeter o «preto», tivéssemos adquirido o «rail» para lhe dispensar serviços e o ligar a nós.

Patriota do melhor quilate, nem mesmo em subordinações a companhias estrangeiras alguma vez deixou de ser inteira e puramente português. Quem estas linhas escreve, jámais pode esquecer o caloroso apoio que de Mariano Machado recebeu quando, no Governo do Moxico, teve necessidade de dissolver a «casa militar» dum oficial britânico, que, ao serviço da «Tanganika Concessions», se esquecera de que estava operando... em território nosso. E, de tudo quanto as suas mãos tocavam, era um instrumento de prosperidade que o seu labor fazia. Assim sucedera em Moçambique. E ainda me hor se afirmara a travessia do sertão de Angola.

Actividade inteligente, que sabia ligar o cérebro á rude tarefa do braço, era sempre obra perfeita aquela que resultava do seu esforço. Bastaria a sementeira, que, incansavelmente, promoveu á margem do Caminho de Ferro de Benguela, para, em letras de ouro, lhe deixar gravado o nome.

A «Gazeta das Colonias», sabe bem que, homens como Mariano Machado, dificilmente se substituem. São gigantes que desaparecem, deixando, quasi sempre, um lugar vazio. Por isso mesmo, depõe sobre a sua campa esta palma de homenagem, molhando-a sentidamente com as lagrimas da sua dor.

MARIANO MACHADO

Our Gazeta must today mourn yet another loss, and an irreparable one: Mariano Machado. Death took him unexpectedly, brutally, in just a few hours of struggle, after having been at our side, still working for the happiness of one of the colonies to which he had devoted, with the spirit of an old-fashioned Portuguese patriot, the best part of his hard-working life.

Mariano Machado was not only a man of merit, who had worn out his shoulders producing work; he was, above all, a soul full of virtues, consumed in defending an ideal. Military expeditions tore from him cries of pain. They tortured him as wasteful follies in a house of misery—devouring gold, consuming lives that would be needed for the production of the land.

His policy was that of the railways. He preferred the peaceful and lasting occupation of the locomotive to the aggressive and fleeting domination of the cannon. He translated into kilometers of railway track the immense sums spent on military operations, and he demonstrated that we would already have had the whistle of the steam engine across all overseas lands if, instead of consuming munitions to subdue the “native,” we had acquired rails to bring them services and bind them to us.

A patriot of the highest quality, not even when subordinated to foreign companies did he ever cease to be entirely and purely Portuguese. The one who writes these lines will never forget the passionate support Mariano Machado gave when, in the government of Moxico, he was obliged to dissolve the “military post” of a British officer, who, in the service of “Tanganyika Concessions,” had forgotten that he was operating... on our territory. And everything he touched with his hands became an instrument of prosperity through his labor. So it was in Mozambique. And even now he had shown it again through the hinterland of Angola.

An intelligent activity, which knew how to unite the brain to the rough work of the hand, always yielded perfect results from his efforts. His tireless sowing along the margins of the Benguela Railway was enough to have his name engraved in letters of gold.

The Gazeta das Colonias knows well that men like Mariano Machado are difficult to replace and that their disappearance almost always leaves an empty place. For this reason, we lay upon his memory this palm of homage, moistening it with the tears of our sorrow.⁴³

General Joaquim José Machado

A few weeks ago, the Lisbon Geographic Society paid a heartfelt and deserved tribute to the memory of the great colonialist and railwayman, General Joaquim José Machado. He is almost exclusively credited with the construction of the Lourenço Marques to Pretoria railway—with the inauguration of a bust, created by the illustrious sculptor Raul Xavier.

Regarding this tribute, the Algarve press, namely "Jornal de Lagos" and "Correio do Sul", presented and defended the idea of inaugurating a commemorative plaque in Lagos, in the house where General Machado was born. They also proposed placing a replica of that monument in a public square in the same city.

General Joaquim José Machado was a great national figure. In Angola, three monuments have already been erected in his honor, in addition to giving his illustrious name to the old village of Camacupa. And, as the "Correio do Sul" recalled, the English government, which is always so sparing in its consecrations to foreigners, also gave the name of "Machadodorp" (dorp, in English, means village) to a large part of the region served by the Lourenço Marques to Pretoria railway.

Born in the Algarve, the General, as you can see, is not a forgotten figure for the people of the Algarve, who greatly prize their most eminent figures. The attitude of the "Jornal de Lagos" and the "Correio do Sul" is extremely commendable. It reflects a regionalist sentiment worthy of note.

General Joaquim José Machado

A Sociedade de Geografia de Lisboa prestou, há poucas semanas, sentida e justa homenagem à memória do grande colonianista e ferroviário, General Joaquim José Machado—deve-se-lhe, quase exclusivamente, a construção do caminho de ferro de Lourenço Marques à Pretória—com a inauguração de um busto, da autoria do ilustre escultor Raul Xavier.

A propósito dessa homenagem, a imprensa algarvia, nomeadamente o «Jornal de Lagos» e «Correio do Sul», apresentaram e defenderam a ideia de se inaugurar, em Lagos, na casa onde nasceu o General Machado, uma lápida comemorativa, e de, na mesma cidade, se colocar, numa praça pública, uma réplica daquele monumento. O General Joaquim José Machado foi uma grande figura nacional. E em Angola já foram levantadas, em sua homenagem, três monumentos, além de ser dado o seu nome ilustre à antiga povoação de Camacupa. E, como lembrou o «Correio do Sul», o governo inglês, sempre tão escasso em consagrações a estrangeiros, deu também o nome de «Machadodorp» (dorp, em inglês, significa aldeia) a uma parte da vasta região servida pelo caminho de ferro de Lourenço Marques a Pretória.

Nascido no Algarve, o General Machado, como se vê, não é uma figura esquecida dos algarvios, que muito prezam os seus vultos mais eminentes. A atitude do «Jornal de Lagos» e do «Correio do Sul» é extremamente simpática. Traduz um sentimento regionalista digno de registo.

COMO O LOBITO DEU NOME E DUPLA NATURALIDADE A UM MENINO "ALFACINHA"

No dia 12 de Abril de 1910 nasceu em Lisboa um menino que viria a ser baptizado na igreja de S. Sebastião da Pedreira, em cujo livro de assentos ficara registado com o nome de Vasco Machado de Carvalho, filho de Duarte Ferreira Pinto Basto de Carvalho e de D. Ester dos Santos Machado.

Nessa altura, seu avô paterno Mariano José Machado, encontrava-se radicado no Lobito exercendo as funções de representante e director de Exploração da Companhia do Caminho de Ferro de Benguela. Desejoso de ter junto de si os entes mais dilectos, ele conseguira incutir no espírito do filho a intenção de tentar a sorte em Angola, garantindo-lhe emprego numa repartição pública em vias de ser criada.

Quando ele desembarcou no Lobito, acompanhado da esposa e do Vasquito, tinha este pouco mais de seis meses. A prometida colocação era a de responsável pela Conservatória do Registo Civil local, cabendo-lha a tarefa de montar os respectivos serviços. Instalada e aberta ao público a novel Repartição, ficou o funcionário à espera de que aparescesse o primeiro utente; entretanto, e considerando que alguém teria de ser o primeiro, lembrou-se que esse alguém até poderia ser o seu próprio filho... E não esteve com mais aquelas: iniciou o livro de registo de nascimentos com a inscrição do Vasquito, que assim ficou com dupla naturalidade e um sobrenome extra, alusivo e em homenagem à sua terra adoptiva. Passando, portanto, a chamar-se Vasco LOBITO Machado de Carvalho.

Isto em termos oficiais, dado que no relacionamento comum do dia-a-dia ele sempre foi designado simplesmente por Vasco Machado.

Ora é à memória deste saudoso lobitanga que hoje dedicamos algumas linhas, absolutamente merecidas. E não só merecidas, mas também sentidas. Porque ele foi um cidadão presente e um amigo devotadíssimo daquela terra que tinha todo o direito de considerar sua e pela qual muito trabalhou.

Vasco Machado era um homem activo, dinâmico, empreendedor. Depois de ter estado ao serviço do CFB durante 12 anos, como escriturário, dedicou-se a outras actividades: foi agente de vendas, comerciante, armazénista e, finalmente, agente geral de seguros. Em todas elas revelou notável capacidade de trabalho, competência e honestidade.

Vasco LOBITO Machado

Grande apaixonado pelos desportos, foi sem dúvida um dos mais ecléticos desportistas de Angola, pois praticou futebol (no Lobito Sports Clube e no Ferrovia de Nova Lisboa), atletismo, ténis, patinagem, "golf", natação, saltos acrobáticos, automobilismo e motociclismo com e sem "side-car".

Foi um dos fundadores, primeiro piloto e instrutor do Aero Clube do Lobito, a cuja direcção presidiu durante 10 anos consecutivos. E foi, também, o principal dinamizador da organização dos circuitos automobilísticos da Restinga, não podendo esquecer-se o papel por ele desempenhado no arranque do Carnaval do Lobito, juntamente com Francisco Melo e a Família Osório.

Vasco Machado regressou definitivamente a Lisboa em 15 de Setembro de 75, tendo ali falecido no dia 28 de Novembro de 85. Não teve o fim de vida com que sempre sonhara e que merecia, mas passou para o outro "lado" com a consciência tranquila, por ter cumprido bem a sua missão e ter sabido honrar o nome que o LOBITO lhe deu.

HOW LOBITO GAVE ITS NAME AND DOUBLE NATIONALITY TO A LITTLE "ALFACINHA"

On April 12, 1910, a boy was born in Lisbon, who would be baptized at the Church of St. Sebastião da Pedreira. In the parish records, his name was entered as Vasco Machado de Carvalho, son of Duarte Ferreira Pinto Basto de Carvalho and D. Ester dos Santos Machado.

At that time, his paternal grandfather, Mariano José Machado, had settled in Lobito, serving as representative and director of operations of the Benguela Railway Company. Longing to have his dearest relatives near him, he managed to instill in his son the idea of trying his luck in Angola, guaranteeing him employment in a newly created public office.

When Duarte disembarked in Lobito, accompanied by his wife and little Vasco (barely six months old), he was promised a position as head of the local Civil Registry Office, with the responsibility of setting it up. Once the office was opened to the public, the official waited for the first client to appear. Considering that someone had to be the first, he thought it fitting that it should be his own son. And so it was: he began the registry of births with the inscription of little Vasco, who thus received double nationality and an extra surname—Lobito—as a tribute to his adopted land. From then on, officially, he was called Vasco Lobito Machado de Carvalho, although in daily life he was simply known as Vasco Machado.

It is to the memory of this late son of Lobito that we dedicate these lines, absolutely well-deserved and, more than deserved, heartfelt. He was a citizen always present and a devoted friend of that land that had every right to consider him one of its own.

Vasco Machado was an active, dynamic, and entrepreneurial man. After 12 years of service at the Benguela Railway as a clerk, he moved on to other activities: sales manager, merchant, warehouse operator, and, finally, insurance agent. In all these roles, he showed a remarkable capacity for work, competence, and honesty.

A great sports enthusiast, he was without a doubt one of the most eclectic athletes in Angola. He practiced football (with Lobito Sports Club and Nova Lisboa Railway Club), athletics, tennis, roller skating, golf, swimming, acrobatics, car racing, and motorcycling with sidecar.

He was one of the founders, first pilot, and instructor of the Lobito Aero Club, of which he served as president for 10 consecutive years. He was also a key promoter of car racing events at Restinga, and played an important role in the creation of the Lobito Carnival, along with Francisco Melo and the Osório family.

Vasco Machado returned permanently to Lisbon on September 15, 1975, and passed away on November 28, 1985, at the age of 75. He did not see the end of life as a loss, but rather as a passage to the "other side," with the peace of having fulfilled his mission and served the land that had given him the name LOBITO.

Guilherme Morbey

(13.04.1933 1:00 Cazombo, Angola, † 29.10.2001 ca. 9:00 Setúbal, Portugal)

Cada um que passa por este mundo, têm a sua história, os seus dramas, os seus sucessos. O “Morbey”, como simplesmente era conhecido, na verdade tinha muito disso tudo.

O “Morbey” foi muito jovem para o Lobito, quando o seu pai Edwin Macauley entrou nos quadros do CFB. Muitos anos depois teve o “Morbey” ali também o seu primeiro emprego.

Na sua infância era bem endiabrado, andava quase sempre descalço, ia para escola na Catumbela e contava as rimas nas costas das surras que ele e os seus amigos apanhavam em casa, no esforço inédito das suas famílias que estes brancos de 2ª viessem a tomar juízo e a vir ser prestáveis na sociedade. Quando um dos seus amigos de infância o visitava, sempre ouvia com regozijo as suas peripécias de juventude, que apesar do “cavalo marinho” não deixou que se deitassem às gargalhadas ainda com 40 e poucos.

Se bem que o “Morbey” fosse católico e crente, não minto ao dizer que o que lhe dava mais força era a prática do desporto, o que fez até aos seus últimos dias. Com o desporto e muito em especial com a natação do Lobito e em Angola ele foi identificado. O primeiro homem a atravessar a baía do Lobito, o primeiro angolano a participar no jogos olímpicos (Roma 1960), etc.. “Mente sã em corpo são” - o desporto não parava com o exercício físico, mas para ele ainda mais importante era a formação moral do desportista e o exemplo/contribuição para a sociedade em que se encontrava (quem não se lembra das suas escolas de natação com quase 150 crianças e jovens). Tanto como desportista como treinador alimentava o espírito de equipa num desporto de individualistas e tendo grande influencia na juventude Lobitanga. Quando o estado português resolvia não levar o/a nadador/a aos campeonatos nacionais apesar deste/a terem boas chances a medalhas, ele organizava bailes e ia pedir dinheiro aos industriais do Lobito, para que aqueles que tinham confiado nele não fossem desiludidos depois do esforço de um ano e mais de treino. Os amigos do Lobito reconheciam o seu desempenho e os seus nadadores foram pequenos embaixadores orgulhosos do Lobito, de Angola e de Portugal.

Associado com o “Morbey” que era um homem bonito, estiveram os seus 4 casamentos pela linha do CFB entre Lobito e Benguela. Dos seus primeiros três casamentos, deixou quatro filhos e até hoje três netos. Se bem que ele tenha tido os seus dramas com as mães, cada filho/a soube que foi muito amado por este pai. As suas preces para que os filhos tivéssemos mais sucesso com os seus casamentos foram ouvidas lá em cima.

Em 1980 veio de vêz para Portugal e pela segunda vez foi parar a Setúbal aonde 20 anos antes tinha criado a secção de natação no Clube Naval Setubalense e inaugurado a primeira e até hoje a única piscina nessa cidade. Em Setúbal ficou viúvo e lutou para criar os dois filhos mais novos desse casamento. O orgulho dele, nessa fase da sua vida, só lhe deixou que muitos poucos amigos lhe dessem uma mão.

Os últimos anos em Setúbal, passou como representante por conta própria de artigos mobiliários das fábricas do norte e muito mais ligado para a família. Ele era o “soba” dos Morbeys. Um ataque forte de depressão o levou desta vida. No dia em que o carro funerário pela manhã passou com o seu corpo pelo centro da cidade de Setúbal, vi muita gente perto do mercado (que não tinha visto até à altura) que pararam o seu quotidiano, tiravam o chapéu, exclamavam “é o senhor Guilherme” apontando para o cortejo e se benziam. Isto não só me arrepiou mas mostrou-me mais uma vez, que ele tinha algo de carismático durante toda a sua vida.

Cada um que passa por este mundo, têm a sua história, os seus dramas, os seus sucessos. O “Morbey” - meu pai - na verdade tinha muito disso tudo ... que a sua alma descanse em paz e volte a rir connosco.

Guilherme Morbey

(13 April 1933, 1:00 AM – Cazombo, Angola – † 29 October 2001, around 9:00 AM – Setúbal, Portugal)

Everyone who passes through this world has their own story, their dramas, and their successes. “Morbey,” as he was simply known, truly had a lot of all of that.

“Morbey” went to Lobito at a very young age, when his father Edwin Macauley joined the staff of the CFB (Benguela Railway). Many years later, “Morbey” also had his first job there.

As a child, he was mischievous, often went barefoot, went to school in Catumbela, and bore on his back the marks of the beatings he and his friends got at home—the unusual effort of their families to ensure that these “second-class whites” would straighten up and become useful members of society. When one of his childhood friends visited him, he always enjoyed listening again to those youthful adventures, which, despite the “horsewhippings,” still made them laugh out loud even in their forties.

Although “Morbey” was Catholic and a believer, I cannot deny that what gave him the most strength was sports, which he practiced until his last days. Through sport, and especially swimming in Lobito and Angola, he became known. He was the first man to cross Lobito Bay, the first Angolan to participate in the Olympic Games (Rome 1960), etc. “A sound mind in a sound body”—for him, sport went beyond physical exercise: even more important was the moral education of the athlete and the example/contribution to society. (Who doesn’t remember his swimming schools with nearly 150 children and young people?) Both as an athlete and a coach, he nurtured the spirit of teamwork in a sport of individualists and had great influence on the youth of Lobito. When the Portuguese government decided not to send a swimmer to the national championships, even though they had a good chance of winning medals, he organized dances and asked Lobito’s businessmen for money so that those who had trusted him would not be disappointed after a year or more of training. His friends in Lobito recognized his dedication, and his swimmers became proud little ambassadors of Lobito, Angola, and Portugal.

Associated with “Morbey,” who was a handsome man, were his four marriages along the CFB line between Lobito and Benguela. From his first three marriages, he left four children and, to this day, three grandchildren. Even though he had his struggles with the mothers, each child knew they were very loved by their father. His prayers that his children might have more success in their marriages were heard up above.

In 1980 he moved permanently to Portugal and, for the second time, ended up in Setúbal, where 20 years earlier he had created the swimming section at the Clube Naval Setubalense and inaugurated the first—and still the only—swimming pool in that city. In Setúbal, he was widowed and struggled to raise the two youngest children from that marriage. His pride, during that phase of his life, only allowed very few friends to give him a hand.

In his last years in Setúbal, he worked independently as a representative for furniture factories from the north and dedicated himself much more to family. He was the “soba” (chieftain) of the Morbeys. A severe attack of depression took him from this life. On the morning when the funeral car passed through the center of Setúbal with his body, I saw many people near the market (people I had never seen until then) stop what they were doing, take off their hats, exclaim “It’s Mr. Guilherme,” pointing to the procession, and make the sign of the cross. This not only gave me chills but showed me once again that he had something charismatic about him throughout his entire life.

Everyone who passes through this world has their own story, their dramas, and their successes. “Morbey”—my father—truly had a lot of all of that ... may his soul rest in peace and laugh with us once more.

regaleando aplausos aos vencedores e aos que, naturalmente, não puderam vencer... Mas todos se tornaram credores deles.

Pelo brilho do Festival e pelo trabalho de muito mérito levado a cabo, daqui dirigimos merecidas felicitações a Guilherme Morbey e ao seu adjunto Arménio Valadares. E nem acrescentamos os votos de que continuem, pois a Escola Infantil é uma realidade que perdurará, temos a certeza.

o festival de apresentação
DA ESCOLA INFANTIL DE NATAÇÃO

A Escola Infantil de Natação, criada e dirigida por Guilherme Morbey, esteve domingo à tarde em festa. Uma festa que não foi apenas dela, mas de uma boa parte da cidade. Na realidade, nove dezenas de crianças e largas centenas de pessoas que por completo enchem o recinto, estiveram na Piscina, aquelas como curiosos do belo espectáculo e estas como espectadoras interessadas. Das varandas do Lobito S. Clube muitas dezenas assistiram também.

A Escola de Guilherme Morbey, iniciada em Dezembro passado, fez a sua apresentação ao público. Uma centena de miúdos ali aprendeu a nadar. Fez agora o exame. Não houve échumbos.

Mestres e alunos estão de parabéns, aqueles pelo óptimo trabalho desenvolvido, feito de paciência e dedicação; estes pelo bom aproveitamento revelado.

O Festival revestiu-se de muito brilho, tendo a ele assistido as mais destacadas individualidades da cidade. Começou com o desfile, seguindo-se a distribuição de medalhas de frequência a todos os participantes e a leitura de um trabalho de Augusto de Carvalho, em que foi posta em evidência a actividade de Guilherme Morbey em favor da natação, primeiro como praticante — dos melhores que Angola possuiu — e depois como monitor e iniciador de uma obra a todos os títulos válida e que há-de proporcionar os melhores frutos. Depois de breves palavras proferidas por Morbey de agradecimento às entidades presentes, aos pais dos alunos, à imprensa e Rádio e a quantos com ele colaboraram na organização deste festival, seguiu-se a leitura do tema «Natação», uma arte com demonstração dos vários estilos pelo seleccionado distrital — Leonel Alves, Graça Marques, Raul Andrade e Francelina Valadares. A fechar a primeira parte, efectuaram os mais pequenos nadadores que ainda não ultrapassaram a classe de aprendizagem. Todos se portaram, no entanto, à altura, exibindo um «à vontade» extraordinário nas provas realizadas.

Um breve intervalo foi preenchido

com a actuação dos conhecidos palhaços «Neco» e «Marcos» que fizeram delirar a petizada e que gentilmente se propuseram colaborar no Festival.

A valid

the presentation festival of the children's swimming school

The Children's Swimming School, created and directed by Guilherme Morbey, celebrated Sunday afternoon. It wasn't just their celebration, but a good portion of the city's. In fact, nine dozen children and hundreds of people, completely filling the venue, were at the pool, the former as 'artists' of the beautiful spectacle, the latter as interested spectators. Many dozens also watched from the balconies of the Lobito S. Clube.

The Guilherme Morbey School, which began last December, made its public debut. A hundred kids all learned to swim. Now they've taken the "exam." There were no "failures."

Teachers and students are to be congratulated, the former for the excellent work carried out, made with patience and dedication; the latter for the good performance shown.

The Festival was very glittering, attended by the city's most prominent figures. It began with a parade, followed by the distribution of attendance medals to all.

the participants and the reading of a work by Augusto de Carvalho, which highlighted Guilherme Morbey's work in favor of swimming, first as one of the best practitioners Angola has had and then as a monitor and initiator of a work that is valid in every respect and will yield the best results. After brief words by Morbey thanking the entities present, the parents of the students, the press, radio and all those who collaborated with him in the organization of this festival, the reading of the theme "Swimming, an art" followed, with demonstrations of the various styles by the district selection Leoni.

Graça Marques, Raul Andrade and Francelina Valadares. Closing the first part, the youngest swimmers who had not yet advanced beyond the learning class performed. However, they all performed impeccably, displaying extraordinary ease in the trials they conducted.

A brief interval was filled

M+P-PROFIL

GUILHERME MORBEY

Fragt man Guilherme Morbey, Fachbereichsleiter beim Mummert + Partner EDV-Service West, nach seiner Heimat, so bekommt man eine ziemlich differenzierte Antwort. Er erblickte vor 36 Jahren in Angola das Licht der Welt und hat dort die meiste Zeit seiner Jugend verbracht.

Politische Unruhen haben ihn mit 20 nach Portugal verschlagen. Dort lebte und studierte der heutige Vater von zwei Kindern (9 und 6 Jahre alt) einige Jahre in Lissabon.

Seine deutsche Frau lernte er bei einem Aufenthalt in Spanien kennen und ging schließlich mit ihr in den kalten Norden: "Mein Zuhause ist heute in Deutschland, aber Heimat - das bedeutet immer noch einen Touch Angola."

Diese Lebensgeschichte hat sicherlich dazu beigetragen, daß der Freund des schwarzen, englischen Humors heute fünf Sprachen beherrscht und mit "multikulturellem Akzent" spricht. Allerdings soll mehr der Zwang als eine mögliche Sprachbegabung dazu geführt haben.

EDV spielt seit dem Studium der Informatik in Nürnberg/Erlangen die berufliche Hauptrolle im Leben Morbeys. Nach fast vier Jahren bei Big Blue war es der Wunsch nach Abwechslung, der ihn zur Beratungstätigkeit bei Mummert + Partner führte. Seit Januar 1989 macht es der Diplom-Informatiker auch hier gleich wieder polyglott: sei es bei dem Unfallmerklattensystem für die Hoechst AG (in 20 Sprachen) oder bei der europaweiten Konsolidierung des E-Mail/BKO für Du Pont. Seine Spezialthemen sind heute Bürokommunikation und -automation.

Sportlich dominiert Schwimmen das Leben des Morbey-Clans: Der Vater war Nationaltrainer in Angola und schwamm bei olympischen Spielen. Der 14-jährige Guilherme schaffte es über seine Paradedrecke 200-Meter-Rücken zum portugiesischen Meister "aller Klassen". Heute rudert er - "auf dem Trockenen im heimischen Wohnzimmer", kommt allerdings nach einer kleinen Pause lächelnd hinterher.

M+P Profil

GUILHERME MORBEY

If you ask Guilherme Morbey, Head of the Computer Science Department at Mummert + Partner EDV-Service West, about his home, you'll get a rather differentiated answer. He saw the light of the world 36 years ago in Angola and spent most of his youth there.

Political unrest caused him and his father to move to Portugal at the age of 20. There, the now father of two children (9 and 6 years old) lived and studied for a few years in Lisbon.

He met his German wife during a stay in Spain and eventually moved with her to the cold North: "My home today is in Germany, but Heimat - that means there is always a touch of Angola."

This life story has certainly contributed to the fact that the man with the dark, English humor masters five languages and speaks with a "multicultural accent." However, it is said that more of a compulsion than a possible language aptitude led to this.

Morbey has been involved in the main role of IT application developments since his computer science studies in Nuremberg/Erlangen. For almost four years now, he has been with Big Blue (IBM), and out of a desire for change, he has brought his consulting expertise to Mummert + Partner. Since January 1989, he has been a graduate computer scientist here again, polyglot - be it at the accident report sheet for Hoechst AG (in 20 languages) or in the pan-European consolidation of E-Mail/BKO for Du Pont. His specialty topics are office communication and -automation.

In terms of sports, swimming dominates the life of the Morbey clan: The father was the national coach in Angola and swam at the Olympic Games. The 14-year-old Guilherme already created quite a sensation over the 200-meter backstroke for the Portuguese "master class." Today he rows 'on dry land' in the living room at home, and then adds with a smile after a short pause.

About the Author

Guilherme Morbey was born in 1956, in Lobito, Angola. After studying Computer Sciences in Germany he had his first work experience with IBM. They soon recognised and supported his consultation talent. Later he worked at a well renowned German consultancy and successfully managed several complex projects for corporate clients. Since 1998 he freelances as a consultant, mainly for financial service providers.

One of his thematic focuses since 2003 is the introduction of data quality management systems.

18. Januar 2014, David Kun und Guilherme Morbey waren im selben Team tätig.

I have worked with him in the past and he really impressed me, which is a rare thing. I have witnessed him take over from the Informatica technical expert who came to support the sales presentation when it turned out that although the sales pitch was for IDQ (Informatica's DQ tool) the supporting expert has never seen IDQ. Guilherme has saved the day by knowing IDQ inside-out and showing off some of its capabilities - Atradius did decide to buy the tool after all. Also, once bought, Guilherme has single handedly kicked off the DQ reporting setup for Atradius when everyone was scared how much work that would be, so he can act as a one-man team doing rapid prototyping when it comes to that as well.

Guilherme retired in April 2022 after 37 years of professional experience, 27 of which as a self-employed person with up to 4 employees.

That was only possible due to generous support and patience of his wife Brigitte. This allowed him to devote almost 100 % of his time to business
